

Columbia CaseWorks Student Fellows

The CaseWorks Student Fellows are selected in April to participate in the program during the second year of the MBA program. Fellows are involved in all aspects of case development. They will utilize their interests and skills both in the support of the program and in the development of teaching cases for the school. The average time commitment will be about 12 hours per month (about three hours per week).

In addition to being student ambassadors for the CaseWorks program, Fellows work with CaseWorks staff to develop cases. Over the course of the year Fellows may participate in all aspects of the case development process including:

- Meeting with faculty to discuss and outline case
- Developing case outline
- Researching case background
- Writing case drafts
- Interviewing case protagonists and others
- Developing exhibits
- Reviewing final drafts
- Developing teaching notes

Fellows may also assist with promoting case development at the School through assisting with focus groups or developing material for the CaseWorks website.

Selection Process:

- CaseWorks Fellows must submit a resume, a transcript of completed courses, and an application. An interview is required.
- Fellows will be selected by staff based on writing skills, background and expertise as required for case topics.
- Special consideration will be given to students who have already arranged with a faculty member to work together on a case.

Special Considerations:

- Summer term: Fellows are not required to begin their term until the September after selection.
- Remuneration: Once a Fellow has completed at least one full case (or a project of similar scope), CaseWorks may elect to remunerate the Fellow for his or her services, depending on the scope and budget of the project.

For questions please contact Caseworks Director Liz Gordon, ejg40@columbia.edu or Associate Director Ronnie Sacco, rgs36@columbia.edu.