Understanding Japan’s Role in a Global Economy

Celebrating Our 30th Anniversary
The Center on Japanese Economy and Business has been the preeminent academic research center for 30 years

About CJEB

The Center on Japanese Economy and Business (CJEB) at Columbia Business School is the premier research center outside Japan focused on understanding Japan’s role in the global economy. Established in 1986 under the direction of Hugh Patrick, CJEB develops and promotes knowledge of Japanese business and economics in an international context.

CJEB maintains longstanding connections with many influential Japanese and Asian corporations, business professionals, scholars and government officials. Close interaction with this network enables CJEB to stay in touch with business sentiment and economic forces in the Asian region, maintaining its position at the center of discussions in this part of the world.

CJEB initiatives include...

- Organizing international symposia, conferences, lectures, and seminars on topics related to Japan, the United States, and the global economy in New York and Tokyo

- Bringing prominent scholars, government officials, and executives from Japan to Columbia for lectures, research, and the Center’s Visiting Fellows Program

- Publishing a Japan-focused Research Paper Series as well as summary reports on the Center’s events

- Assisting with various student-led projects related to Japan, including an annual study tour to Tokyo and other cities in Japan

- Developing a major database of statistical resources on the Japanese economy available for the Columbia community

- Drawing from CJEB’s network of contacts with Japanese companies to bring practitioners into the MBA classroom

- Providing fellowships that cover full tuition costs for doctoral students in the field of the Japanese economy and research grants and summer stipends for graduate and PhD students with research on the Japanese economy and business systems

Visiting Fellows Program

Every year, Columbia Business School’s Center on Japanese Economy and Business (CJEB) hosts roughly 10-15 Visiting Fellows selected from a variety of backgrounds in Japanese business, government, and academia. CJEB Visiting Fellows receive a unique research and networking experience at one of the world’s most prestigious business schools within a top ranking university and a dynamic city.

Each CJEB Visiting Fellow pursues a challenging program of study, agreed upon by the candidate and his/her sponsor and approved by CJEB. Activities include:

- Auditing and actively participating in classes at the Business School and other schools at Columbia (per instructors’ permission)
- Receiving one-on-one consultation to mold presentation and public speaking skills to fit the global standard
- Attending CJEB events organized for Fellows, including networking gatherings and an annual educational field trip
- Taking advantage of Columbia’s rich resources, including twenty-two libraries and a diverse calendar of public events at the Business School and beyond
- Joining monthly CJEB seminars and giving a presentation to an audience of other Fellows, faculty, advisors
- Engaging in an ongoing exchange of ideas with CJEB faculty
- Receiving quality administrative support from CJEB staff

The New Global Financial Architecture Program

Established by CJEB in 2009, the New Global Financial Architecture (NGFA) Program aims to engage in analytical and policy-oriented evaluations of major global financial and economic issues and regulatory changes through conferences, symposia, brainstorming sessions, and research activities.

The NGFA program brings together distinguished finance and economics professors at Columbia Business School and other parts of the University with scholars and financial market participants in the United States, Japan, Europe, and China. While emphasis is placed on Japan and the United States, this necessarily is in the broader context of the global financial system and all of its major players. Potential topics include, but are not limited to, financial system restructuring; development of national and international regulatory systems; effective governance, supervision, and monitoring; the operations of and interactions among specific financial markets; the relationships between finance and the performance of the economy; and the nature and role of government and monetary policies.

As part of the NGFA program, CJEB also aims to include a series of workshops in which faculty and practitioners meet to discuss specialized topics, to research the development of joint research projects, and to plan and develop new curricula based on the work of the program.
CJEB established the Corporate Governance Program in 2015, with the intention to explore Japan's changing corporate governance initiatives. Corporate governance is currently one of the top policy priorities in Japan and a series of wide-ranging proposals were recently announced, significantly impacting the way Japanese corporations will operate. After the successful turnout at CJEB’s 2015 Tokyo Conference, where our guest speakers examined Japan’s corporate governance policies, CJEB decided to further the discussion by organizing a series of public programs and research programs under this new initiative.

Featured Program Highlights

CJEB hosts world-class public programs which bring together policymakers, members of the private sector, academics, and students from Japan, the United States, and all over the world.

Recent event highlights include:

How Supply Chains Respond to Crises: The Japanese Experience

March 3, 2015

The 16th Annual Mitsui USA Symposium featured Robert Young, vice president purchasing at Toyota Motor Engineering and Manufacturing North America, Inc., and Albert Matias, vice president and chief procurement officer for the Americas at Hitachi America, Inc. Both speakers gave an overview of how their respective firms approach risk management for complex global supply chains, and discussed the lessons learned in response to natural disasters such as the earthquake and tsunami that struck Japan in March 2011. This symposium was co-sponsored by The Mitsui USA Foundation. WEAI’s Toyota Research Program served as an outreach partner.

Japan’s Changing Corporate Governance

May 21, 2015

This conference was part of CJEB’s NGFA program and focused on the proposed implementation of new corporate governance policies in Japan. Keynote speakers included Yasuchika Hasegawa, chairman of Takeda Pharmaceutical Company Ltd., and Bruce Greenwald, Robert Heilbrunn Professor of Finance and Asset Management at Columbia Business School. Two panels were held, with topics discussing the changing role of corporate governance in Japan and the perspectives as outside directors in Japanese corporations. The Development Bank of Japan Inc. cosponsored this conference.

Japan and the World Economy: Challenges Over the Coming Decade

April 6, 2015

This special symposium, which was broadcast globally by NHK World as part of their “Global Agenda” program, addressed the current state and future outlook of fiscal and monetary policy and structural reform in both Japan and the United States. It featured panelists from CJEB’s core faculty including Glenn Hubbard, dean of Columbia Business School, Joseph E. Stiglitz, University Professor of Columbia University, David E. Weinstein, director of research at CJEB, and Takatoshi Ito, associate director of research at CJEB. Professor Patrick moderated the program.
