OVERVIEW

Course selection for the Spring 2015 term is about to begin. The following information tells you everything you need to know about this process. The Bidding Online Selection System (BOSS) site also contains an FAQ/Help area that includes guides and documents to help you familiarize yourself with the system before bidding begins.

You’ll find Spring 2015 course information listed on the MBA Course Catalogue on BOSS (under MBA students). Please note that courses may be cancelled at the discretion of the Dean’s Office.

It is very important that you read this entire document. Covered below:

I. HOW BIDDING WORKS FOR ELECTIVES

Lifetime bid points are given upfront and carry over from semester-to-semester. You can use them equally in each semester, spend most of them on courses this semester, or save most of them for future use. The strategy is up to you. Once you’ve decided on the courses you wish to bid for, prioritize them and allocate your points accordingly.

Bidding is not time-dependent. All bids placed during a given round are processed at the end of that round. You may change your mind and re-allocate your bid points at any time, and as often as you like, within a round.

You can use your points to bid for a full course load or a partial course load. If there are courses you think will not fill up, and you’re willing to risk not getting into them, you may want to wait until the add/drop period when you can add them to your schedule without having to use bid points. It’s up to you.

During bidding rounds students may only bid for courses up to a maximum of 16.5 credits.

Block week courses, like all elective courses, can be dropped in the first 24 hours of Rounds 1B, 2 and 3, and bid points will be refunded.

The system will not prevent you from bidding on courses that overlap. If successful in securing a seat in both courses, it is the student’s responsibility to drop one of the conflicting courses. In other words, by the end of the bidding rounds you need to be enrolled in courses you can actually attend. Students may not register for courses that overlap.

The system will not prevent you from bidding on courses that are full. BOSS will allow you to bid on a full class. A course with no seats available will say “Capacity (Full)” under the course name and credits. Bidding on a full class will not put you on a waitlist; that is a separate round that happens after bidding is over. Bidding on a full class will tie up your bid points and available credits for bidding. At the end of the round, your points will be refunded. Please note that in Rounds 1B, 2, and 3 of bidding, students do have the first 24 hours of the round to drop a course they received in the previous bidding rounds for a refund. Therefore, you should check after the first 24 hours to see if the course is still full.

You can either bid on a specific section of a course, all sections of a course, or only those sections taught by a certain professor. If you select “any section” the system will try to put you into your first choice; if that’s full, it will check to see if there are other sections available, and will randomly put you into an open section. It does not check for time conflicts with your other courses, nor is it not able to ascertain which open section will have the lowest clearing price. You will be charged the clearing price of the section that you get into. Please note, if you choose “any section”, whichever section you place your bid on will be considered first.

At the end of a round, bids are processed and the highest bidders are enrolled in the course. The lowest successful bid will become that course’s “clearing price” for that round, and everyone who successfully bid for the course in that round will be charged the same price. Points bid in excess of the clearing price will be refunded for use in the next round. Unsuccessful bidders will get all their bid points refunded.

For example, let’s say there are 60 seats available in Earnings Quality in Round 1A. If 40 people bid 500 points for the course, 25 people bid 100 points, and 10 people bid 50 points, the clearing price would be 100 points. All 40 students who bid 500 would get into the course, and receive a refund of 400 points. The system would then randomly select 20 of the 25 students who bid 100 points, and enroll them in the course. The 5 unsuccessful 100-point bidders would get all of their points refunded, as would the 10 students who bid 50 points. (Disclaimer: these numbers are just given as an example; they are not a recommendation of a price for this course.)

In another example, if there are 60 seats available in Capital Markets in Round 1A, and 10 people bid 500 points for the course, and 20 people bid 1 point for the course, the clearing price for that course in that round would be 1 point. All 30 students would get into the course, and the 10 who bid 500 points would get a refund of 499 points.
In between rounds, BOSS can look a little strange – bid points may seem off and bids for courses may not appear. Once the round has been resolved and OSA notifies you that enrollments have been completed, everything should look clear.

Students will be able to view their individual bidding results on BOSS before the next round begins (under “My Account/Click to Bid” – the tab “My Schedule & Current Bids”). They will also have access to an “account statement” for their bid points, enabling them to track “debits” and “credits” and see their current balance (under “My Actions & Bidding History”).

At the beginning of the next round, students will be able to see which courses are open and which are closed. (Go to “My Account/Click to Bid”, then “Create/Alter Schedules”.) If a course is open, the number of taken seats will be listed under the course title and credits. For example, if a course has 50 total seats, and 30 of them are taken, the course will show: “30/50 Capacity”. That means 20 seats are still available to bid on. Please note that BOSS will allow you to bid on a full class, but it will tie up your credits and your bid points. A course with no seats available will say “Capacity(Full)” under the course name and credits. Students who were unable to get into all the courses they wanted in the first round will continue to bid on open courses in successive rounds until their schedule is filled.

As you make adjustments to your schedule, you may wish to drop courses. In the first 24 hours of each bidding round after round 1A, students will be able to drop courses they got in the previous rounds but no longer want, and will have their bid points refunded. You can only drop courses during bidding rounds at the time specified above. Once the “drop period” of Round 3 is over, you cannot drop courses you’re enrolled in until the Add/Drop period.

Note: If you drop courses during the “drop period” of Rounds 1B, 2, and 3 your bid points will be refunded. Points are ONLY refunded for courses dropped DURING BIDDING ROUNDS. If you drop later, during the add/drop period, points are not refunded.

It is possible that a closed course may open up again during the drop period of a round. During drop periods, BOSS runs in real-time so that you can see seats become available as they are dropped, but it is only after the round’s 24-hour drop period ends that you will know the total number available for that round – helpful information when considering your bidding strategy. Students may place (and change) their bids on open courses throughout the round, and they’re processed when the round is over.

Students enrolled in one section of a course have the ability to bid on other sections of that same course during subsequent bidding rounds. (They can either bid on one specific alternate section, or on all alternate sections of the course.) If the bid is successful, BOSS will enroll you in the new section and drop you from the old section. The bid points paid for the initial section will be refunded, and students will only have to pay for the section in which they’re ultimately enrolled. The advantage is that you get to hang onto your seat in the old section in case your bid on the new section(s) is unsuccessful. Of course, students continue to have the option of dropping the unwanted section during the "drop period" at the beginning of a bidding round. And it makes sense to do that if you definitely don’t want the old section, even if you’re unable to get into the new section.

During the add/drop period, students can simultaneously add and drop different sections of the same course. When you select the “change section” link on BOSS, the system will automatically drop your currently enrolled section and enroll you in the new section.

Keep in mind that the clearing price for a course may change from round to round. Going back to the previous example: if in Round 1B there were 30 students who bid 100 points on the 30 remaining seats in Capital Markets, they would all get into the course. But they would be charged 100 points, which was the clearing price for that course in Round 1B. They would not be charged the Round 1A clearing price of 1 point.

Be sure to check course descriptions for pre- or co-requisites. If you have not taken the pre-requisite for a course, it is not recommended that you bid for the course. BOSS will not block you from bidding, but the Student Affairs Office does check for pre-requisites after each round is processed, and removes students who have not fulfilled them. If you successfully bid on a course that has a co-requisite, you will be permitted to keep that course throughout the bidding rounds. However, you must successfully enroll in the co-req by the end of add/drop. Students who are not enrolled in the co-requisite by that time will be dropped from the course that requires it.

If you successfully bid on a course with a pre-requisite for which you are taking the exemption exam, you may remain in the course until your exam results are in. Students who have not taken and passed an exemption exam for the pre-requisite by the end of add/drop will be removed from the course that requires it.

The only way to remain in a course for which you do not have the pre- or co-requisite is to appeal to the division chair under the division which the course is housed in. Please plan accordingly in case your appeal is denied.

It is important to remember that most finance electives require B8306 Capital Markets as a pre- or co- requisite.
II. SWAPS

Swaps can be placed at any time throughout the process all the way to the close of add/drop. Swaps will be managed by the Office of Student Affairs. To request a swap, please use the swap request form available in Uris 105 or email us at osa@gsb.columbia.edu.

Note: swaps take place between students who are already enrolled in courses; you give up your seat in one course in exchange for another student’s seat in a different course. You cannot swap your enrolled seat in one course in exchange for an open seat in a different course. Please note that not all classes are eligible for swaps.

III. WAITLIST

We will be running two waitlist rounds for the Spring of 2015. The first is for all courses, including most block weeks, that are full at the end of the final bidding round, and will take place August 6 at 10 am - August 7 at 4pm. The second waitlist will take place January 29 at 10 am through January 30 at 10 am for any additional courses that fill in the first few days of add/drop. Please check BOSS for specific courses that may have exceptions. The waitlist rounds will include applicable EMBA classes as well.

- Waitlist bids will be organized by bid amount, highest to lowest, just like the bidding rounds.
- You may place waitlist bids on as many credits as you would like. However, should you be enrolled off the waitlist and go over your credit capacity for the semester, it is your responsibility to drop a course to get yourself at the correct number of credits before add/drop is over.
- The instructor may have additional requirements that you must meet, including attendance in all classes before the seat becomes available. If such requirements exist, they will be listed on the MBA Course Schedule beneath the course title. As seats become available in the class, the instructor will be using the waitlist to determine who will get the seat.
- If there are no additional requirements, BOSS will automatically enroll students from the waitlist as seats become available, and notify them by email.
- If the student decides they no longer want the course, they must drop it in BOSS and reply to the notification email within 24 hours to have their waitlist bid points refunded.
- For the purpose of determining a clearing price, the waitlist will be treated as an additional round:
  - If you get into a class from the waitlist you will initially be charged your bid amount for the seat (and as waitlist seats will be few, bid what you are willing to pay)
Guide to Bidding - Spring 2015

- At the end of add/drop, we will refund points so all seats filled from the waitlist are charged the course’s waitlist “clearing price"
- All students on the waitlist who do not get a seat will have their points refunded

IV. ADD/DROP

While we hope that students will satisfactorily fill their schedule before the end of bidding, the add/drop round enables you to fill your schedule by adding a course that has an available seat or to drop a course you no longer want.

There will be three add/drop periods:

First add/drop period (Jan 8 – Jan 28)
-full-term, A-term, and B-term courses (please note Block Week 1 courses can only be dropped until 1/9 at 4 pm; Block Week 2 courses can only be dropped until 1/16 at 4 pm)

Second add/drop period (Jan 30 – Feb 4)
- full-term, A-term, and B-term courses

B-term add/drop period (March 23-27)
- B-term courses only

If you need to make changes during an add/drop round, bid points are not involved. During the add/drop round students may add open courses without payment of bid points. Similarly, students who drop courses during add/drop will not receive a refund of points.

Courses that have students on a waitlist will have open seats filled from the top of the waitlist until there are no more students on the list. At that point any additional seats that become available can be added directly through BOSS in add/drop.

At the beginning of add/drop, all students will have their credits increased to 18 credits. Those third and fourth semester students who qualify academically by earning a cumulative GPA of 7.01 or higher (above HP level) may petition the Office of Student Affairs to take up to 21 credits. (Please email osa@gsb.columbia.edu to request 21 credits.) Additionally, any third or fourth semester students enrolled in a 3 credit block week course may also request up to 21 credits.

During an add/drop period, students can simultaneously add and drop different sections of the same course. When you select the “change section” link on BOSS, the system will automatically drop your currently enrolled section and enroll you in the new section.

Students may add an open elective that conflicts with a core course. Students should contact Student Affairs to ask for a switch after they’ve succeeded in getting the elective. If there are seats available, Student Affairs will move them into another section of the core course.
V. HOW BID POINTS ARE ALLOCATED

Students receive bid points in two ways:
• An initial “lifetime” allocation
• Credit for taking Business School electives

Initial Lifetime Allocation
The number of bid points allocated is based upon the number of electives that a student is required to take throughout the MBA program. All students are allocated 1,000 points per required elective. (In this calculation, an elective is assumed to be a full-term, 3-credit course.)

MBA students who entered in the Spring of 2013 or the Spring of 2015 are required to bid on the equivalent of 13.5 electives (at 3 credits each) and are therefore given 13,500 bid points. (In the first year, students are enrolled in 19.5 credits of core courses and bid on 10.5 credits of electives. In the second year, most students bid on ten electives or 30 credits of electives.) Dual degree students will be given 9,000 bid points.

Incoming exchange students, who enroll for one semester (five electives) at Columbia, are given 5,000 bid points. Similarly, Knight-Bagehot fellows, who bid on courses for one semester (five courses), are also given 5,000 bid points.

“Extra Credit” For Enrollment in Electives
Students will be given 200 additional bid points for each full-term, 3-credit Business School elective they’re enrolled in (beginning in their second term); and 100 bid points for each half-term, 1.5-credit course. “Extra credit” is only given for B-School electives, and not for core courses. Students are not given additional bid points for electives taken in their first term.

VI. SPECIAL SITUATIONS

Some circumstances that Spring outside the usual MBA student experience may affect bid point allocations:

• Exchange programs: students who wish to spend a semester abroad as an exchange student will have to “pay” 4,000 bid points. The points will be deducted from their allotment just prior to Round 1 of bidding for the term in which they’ll be on exchange. Students will need to plan ahead to ensure they have the requisite points to participate.

• Application courses: some courses are only available by application. The amount charged can vary by course. Students accepted into the Value Investing sequence will be charged 9,000 points for the entire package of required VI courses. In a very few cases, a course may admit some students through application and others through bidding. Biddable seats are treated just like any other course - students will be charged the clearing price from the bidding round.

- Cross-registration: students do not have to use bid points for courses taken at other schools in the University. They also do not receive “extra credit” bid points for enrollment in such courses.

- Independent Study and Cross-Cultural Seminar: these courses do not require bid points, and do not gain “extra credit” for students.

- Core course exemptions: Students who exempt out of second-term core courses will be given additional points with which to bid on electives during online course bidding: 500 points for each 1.5-credit core course exempted. (Additional bid points are not given for exempting out of B8306 Capital Markets & Investments, or B8331 Real Estate Finance, which are electives.) Please note: students who exempt out of first-term core courses add available electives during the add/drop period, when no bid points are charged. They do not receive additional bid points because they do not need to bid for these electives in BOSS.
