DIGITAL MARKETING STRATEGY

In a digital age, marketers must be able to plan, implement, and measure digital strategies that are suited to today’s customers and integrated with a company’s traditional marketing and business practices.

Digital Marketing Strategy helps executives face these challenges by presenting the tools and best practices that the world’s most successful companies are using to gain competitive advantage online.

HOW YOU WILL BENEFIT

The course will provide you with the digital marketing concepts, best practices, and tools to equip you to lead your own digital strategies that achieve high-impact marketing objectives.

- Learn to develop plans that leverage social media for customer acquisition and retention.
- Create strategies to bring customers into your innovation process.
- Learn how to develop analytics to measure the impact and ROI of digital marketing.
- Understand how to manage brand risk and set expectations for online conversations.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

Mid- and upper-level executives responsible for developing and implementing marketing strategy in B2B and B2C campaigns.

DATES

- October 21–23, 2013
- June 23–25, 2014
- September 15–17, 2014
- December 8–10, 2014

TUITION

- $5,650 (2013)
- $5,850 (2014)

Includes breakfast, lunch, and all materials.

—Alex Harper, General Manager, White Lotus Foods

“The DIRECTOR’S VIEW

“Digital technologies are transforming customers’ relationships with each other and with brands and businesses of all kinds. In order to engage today’s customers and drive growth, marketers must be able to plan, implement, and measure digital strategies that are clearly linked to business objectives.”

—David Rogers, Executive Director, BRITE, Columbia Business School Center on Global Brand Leadership