The Global Economic Environment Sequence
Understanding Today's Macroeconomy

GEE I Core
Prof. Emi Nakamura
Prof. Pierre Yared
Prof. John Donaldson

Fall, B-term (6 weeks)
Spring, B-term (6 weeks)
for J termers

> Economic Growth
> Business Cycles
> Global Imbalances

GEE II
Macroeconomic Policy
Prof. Andreas I. Mueller
Spring, A-term (6 weeks)
> Business Cycles
> Macroeconomic Stabilization Policy
> Macroeconomic News and Asset Prices

GEE III may be taken at the same time as GEE II
Prof. Frederic S. Mishkin
Spring (12 weeks)
Co-requisite: GEE II
> Structure of Financial Markets
> Financial Development and Economic Growth
> Financial Crises and Financial Market Regulation
> Monetary Policy and Central Bank Strategies

GEE III
Financial Markets and the Macroeconomy

THE GLOBAL ECONOMIC ENVIRONMENT SEQUENCE

Columbia Business School
John Donaldson
Mario J. Gabelli Professor of Finance
jd34@columbia.edu

Professor Donaldson is a recipient of the Columbia University Presidential Teaching Award. His research focuses on business cycles and asset pricing, with a particular emphasis on the real side of the economy.

Frederic S. Mishkin
Alfred Lerner Professor of Banking and Financial Institutions
fsm3@columbia.edu

Professor Mishkin has held stints as the Director of Research and Executive VP of the Federal Reserve Bank of NY (’94-’97), as well as a Governor of the Federal Reserve System (’06-’08).

Andreas I. Mueller
Assistant Professor
Finance and Economics
amueller@columbia.edu

Professor Mueller received his Ph.D. from the IIES, Stockholm University, and was awarded the Arnb ergska Prize for his dissertation work by the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences.

Emi Nakamura
Associate Professor of Business
enakamura@columbia.edu

Professor Nakamura was named one of the top 25 economists under 45 by the IMF. Her research is mainly focused on monetary economics, macro-finance, and price dynamics.

Pierre Yared
Associate Professor of Business
pyared@columbia.edu

Professor Yared is a macroeconomist whose research focus is growth, development, and political economy. In 2014, he was awarded the Dean’s Award for Teaching Excellence in a Core Course.

Stephen P. Zeldes
Benjamin Rosen Professor of Finance and Economics; Chair of Finance and Economics Division
spz1@columbia.edu

Professor Zeldes is an award winning educator whose research focuses on macroeconomics and finance, household savings, government budgets, and social security.