

NYC: Innovative and Entrepreneurial Solutions to the City's Complex Challenges

John Gamberoni

John Gamberoni is an executive partner at Accenture and leads the company's Management Consulting practice for the State, Local and Provincial Government Client Service Group. In this role he is responsible for the strategic development and operations of Accenture's Management Consulting practice – including strategy, cost and revenue optimization, supply chain, customer service transformation, business process improvement, and organizational change and human resources transformation - for all government, higher education and non-profit clients across the US and Canada.

Mr. Gamberoni joined Accenture in 1993. Since that time that time he has led large scale technology implementations and business transformation programs for dozens of government and private sector clients with a focus on cost reduction and customer solutions. Mr. Gamberoni became a partner in 2004. Before joining Accenture he worked for LAU Technologies as an Industrial Engineer. He holds a Masters of Science degree in Industrial and Systems Engineering (honors) from Northeastern University, and a Bachelors of Science degree (honors) from the University of Massachusetts. He is based in Massachusetts.

About Accenture

Accenture is a global management consulting, technology services and outsourcing company, with more than 223,000 people serving clients in more than 120 countries. Combining unparalleled experience, comprehensive capabilities across all industries and business functions, and extensive research on the world's most successful companies, Accenture collaborates with clients to help them become high-performance businesses and governments. The company generated net revenues of US$21.6 billion for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, 2010